

Example of complement process for RootLGR

In the case where some labels are marked 'blocked' by RootLGR but one or more such blocked labels are requested to be delegated by the applicant, the complement process for RootLGR generates allocatable variant labels that are the union of requested labels and their allocatable variant labels.

This is necessary because any combination of characters in repertoire is valid for Japanese string.

